Aruba Hi-Winds 2012 is nearly here

Tuesday, July 3 registration will open for the Annual Aruba HI-Winds competitions; colorful sails will be seen over the shore and in the skies, and an international coterie of the finest amateur windsurfers and kitesurfers compete. Hi Winds Committee President Wim Eelens and veteran race announcer and MC Evert Bongers welcomed island media and sponsors to the official announcement at Taste of Belgium Restaurant on Thursday afternoon.

Organizers Ivar van Luyk and Reinier Middel, had this to say about this year's event: "This year we spent more attention on the event site: there will also be a lounge room where people can relax, which makes it all more pleasant for participants and spectators."

Along with all the on the surf and in the sky the event will host many of the extracurricular activities that make it so popular with those on the beach: a Fashion Show, a Night Kite Show, and local radio station Cool FM will be back with their "House of Glass" broadcasting all the exciting results and hosting live interviews.

The HI Winds is famous for its daily Happy Hours with bargain prices on Amstel Bright, a stalwart sponsor for years, as well as the great weekend dance parties, this year featuring live music with Sonic Lab, Earplugs, Honey-pot, Mystical Connection, Datapanik and Orange Grove.

On Monday, July 9th, there will be the closing ceremony at Paseo Herencia shopping center in Palm Beach, where the winners will be announced and trophies awarded. It is an entertaining event to which all are invited.

Filmmakers of the Future screen their work on the final day of the AIFF

Among beauty, the desolation of losing a loved one

The Aruba International Film Festival is a week-long multi-faceted event dedicated to the art of moviemaking, and a very large part of its purpose is to inspire and engage the young people of Aruba. This has been accomplished in a number of methods, but one of which Executive Producer Jonathan Vieira is most proud is to be able to offer professional level training to potential Aruba filmmakers with the intensive 96 Hours Film Lab.

Initiated last year through the efforts of AIFF Staffer Donna Miklojcik, Aruba welcomed Darryl Wilson, NYU Experimental Film Professor, for the first such class, which attracted a dozen students. This year, joining him for the program were Maureen and Daniel Heffernan, also enormously respected educators in the field, teaching acting and scriptwriting and advance editing techniques, respectively.

This year, the 96 Hour Film Lab program hosted 59 students in a wide age range, due to the gracious sponsorship of Digicel Telecommunications Company, which funded 60 scholarships, along with the introduction to the Traveling Caribbean Film Showcase for 3000 school students.

“Thoughtfully sourced-carefully served” Hyatt culinary policy seeks to inspire and stimulate local economy

The concept of restaurants and resort culinary departments using fresh, locally produced products as opposed to imported goods, would only make sense to almost anyone. However, on a desert island such as Aruba, where agriculture, for the most part, is only practiced by a very select few, usually producing fruit and vegetables sufficient for family consumption, it is revolutionary.

This is the policy introduced by Hyatt Regency culinary executives along with Gerald, (Gino) Kock of the University of Aruba on Wednesday afternoon, June 27. Kock, a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, New York, now a doctoral student and part-time member of the Faculty of Tourism and Hospitality Management Studies at the U of A. He is dedicating a case study to the feasibility of growth of an agricultural industry in Aruba deploying modern technologies such as hydroponics, stimulated by commercial ventures turning to locally produced fruits and vegetables for their kitchens.

In 2011, Hyatt had already made the corporate decision of promoting a culinary policy they call “thoughtfully sourced-carefully served,” which will attempt to rely on locally produced ingredients whenever possible; a sample menu was prepared by Hyatt Chef D’Cuisine Jeramy Wooldridge demonstrating the delicious dishes they eventually hope to integrate into their menus along with the local fits of families raising their own food as a way to save money and improve the quality of their diet. It is acknowledged that Aruba is a nation that depends entirely too much on imported goods; methods of making it self-sufficient in food production are considered eminently worthwhile.

Hyatt culinary policy . . .

Hyatt Food and Beverage Manager Drew Carnahan offered kudos to Gino Kock for encouraging this program, and particularly Ari Lichtenstein, a pioneer in modern agriculture on Aruba, from whom the hotel obtains its fresh tomatoes, cucumbers and peppers. Chef Wooldridge confirmed not only the finer flavor of locally grown produce, but their longer shelf life, and most importantly, the fact they are organically grown without repellents, chemical fertilizers or enhancements. Other produce used by the resort are mushrooms, spinach and pumpkin, and the hotel has their own fresh herb garden on premises.

The use of local ingredients also encourages adding traditional native dishes to the menu, another aspect of the resort's policy, providing for their guests a more unique and authentic gastronomic experience related to the destination, which is a proven attraction.

"At Hyatt Regency, we want to meet the needs of the present generation without compromising what's best for future generations," stated Hyatt GM Fred Hoffman. "We believe we have a responsibility to ensure our dishes are thoughtfully sourced and carefully served. This new philosophy to support the health of our guests, the planet and the local community is at the core of every food and beverage decision we make at Hyatt Regency Aruba. We are evolving the way we purchase and serve food; we believe it is what our guests deserve."

According to Susan Santiago, Vice President of Food and Beverage, and former GM of Hyatt Regency Aruba, one of the key pillars of this program is focused on a healthy planet by implementing sustainable practices that will improve the long-term health of people and the planet. However, more directly to this event, this program is intended to support healthy communities by sourcing from local suppliers as well as sharing knowledge and actively supporting farmers, farmers' markets and other community events.

The collaborative program hopes to see these policies practiced as widely as possible at all island culinary venues, thus encouraging not only better quality in what is served to patrons, but also helping to establish a thriving industry on Aruba and facilitating the diversification of the island's economy.

Big Hugs for all the instructors

The results of the students' combined efforts were screened on Thursday afternoon, June 28, the final day of the AIFF. 25 short films were produced, plus an exercise for all facets of production deploying a green screen.

As to be expected, given the short time to produce a film and the limits of location, most stories focused on Aruba, or included distinctive elements of the island and its culture to advance the plot. Many reflected on issues that had obviously been very much on the mind of the filmmaker for some time; concerns for the environment, loss of a loved one, the neglect and mistreatment of dogs and, as there were quite a few teenagers, the anxieties of coming of age.

The results were admirable, some quite original and innovative, particularly considering most were a first-time effort, with the information and skills absorbed within only a few

The instructors and Digicel Acting Manager Aruba Remko van der Veldt expressed their satisfaction with the productions and the demonstration of potential, with the hope that such programs will continue to inspire an interest and experimentation in this modern art form and students will continue their education and pursue filmmaking seriously.

Madoff brother pleads guilty, accepts 10-year term

NEW YORK (AFP) - Peter Madoff, brother of shamed US financier Bernard Madoff, pleaded guilty yesterday to helping cook the books of the world's biggest ever Ponzi scheme and accepted a 10-year prison term.

"I apologize to the people I hurt and to my family," Madoff, 66, told a packed Manhattan courtroom after confessing to tax fraud and falsifying documents on behalf of his brother, who is already behind bars.

Madoff pleaded guilty to two counts of conspiracy to commit securities fraud and falsifying investment records.

"Peter Madoff enabled the largest fraud in human history. He will now be jailed well into old age, and he will forfeit virtually every penny he has," said prosecutor Preet Bharara.

Madoff, who was arrested earlier at his lawyer's Manhattan office, spoke clearly during his statement, but broke down when he apologized toward the end and said he was initially shocked and horrified by his brother's fraud.

"Until December 2008 I never suspected that my brother stole from anyone. I was in shock and devastated," he said. "I lost my reputation. My family was torn apart because of my brother."

Madoff's bail was set at $5 million in securities and $1 million in cash. Restrictions were placed on his travel and he was required to surrender his passport. A formal sentencing hearing was set for October 4.

Obama surveys Colorado wildfire 'disaster'

A water transport helicopter (bottom) passes evacuated homes threatened by wildfire in Colorado Springs on Thursday. US President Barack Obama yesterday declared wildfires in Colorado a "major disaster" before flying out to the western state to tour the damage for himself. The inferno destroyed at least 346 houses, forced some 36,000 residents to evacuate, and left at least one person dead, according to officials. It is still threatening some 20,000 homes and 160 commercial buildings.

The wholesale value of the drugs is approximately $48 million.

Furious Spanish investors seek Bankia scalps

VALENCIA (AFP) - Furious pensioners who lost savings through investments in ruined lender Bankia booed its managers yesterday, branding them thieves, at the first shareholders' meeting since the bank's huge rescue.

Hundreds of people, many of them elderly, descended on the meeting in the eastern city of Valencia, demanding answers after Bankia crumbled under a mountain of bad loans and had to seek massive state aid.

"Thieves!", "Go to jail!"

yelled the crowd as they queued outside the Valencia Conference Centre for the meeting. Nearby, activists from the popular "indignant" protest movement banged cooking pans, decrying the Bankia "con".

Thailand incinerates drugs worth $225 million

Bangkok (AFP) - Thai authorities on Friday burned more than $225 million of seized drugs -- including 21 million amphetamine tablets -- as the kingdom ramps up efforts to stem the flow of narcotics in the country.

The ceremony, presided over by Prime Minister Yingluck Shinawatra, saw 4,000 kilogrammes (four tonnes) of drugs burned, including large hauls of heroin, speed pills and crystal methamphetamine -- known as 'ice'.

Authorities said they have a further 24,000 kilos of confiscated drugs worth an estimated $2.2 billion awaiting destruction after they were seized in as yet unresolved drug cases.

"The government considers drugs suppression a key policy and burning the drugs is one measure to stop drugs from reaching the community," Yingluck said at the event at an industrial estate in Ayutthaya province, north of Bangkok.

The drugs were incinerated in high temperature furnaces that authorities said would prevent drug fumes from rising into the air.

Since Yingluck's government took office in August there have been almost daily drug seizures as part of a wide crackdown on drug use and dealing.

More than 300,000 people have been treated in rehabilitation centres since October 2011, according to the public health ministry, adding half of them are aged between seven and 24 years.

The ministry estimates there are two million drug addicts across the country.

Thailand, along with other countries in the region, has seen a marked increase in seizures of methamphetamine as the world opiate trade declines.

Finnish man jailed for sexually abusing girls he met online

HELSINKI, (AFP) - A Helsinki court sentenced a 38-year-old Finnish man to four-and-a-half years in prison for sexually abusing girls he met through a popular online game, an court official said Friday.

"Franek Kalmet was found guilty of sexually abusing young girls between the ages of nine and 14 and sentenced to prison," the official told AFP.

The man met the girls through a popular Finnish online game called Habbo Hotel, the official said.

In most cases the man tried to lure girls into having sex and sent them messages with sexual content. In one instance he managed to lure one of the victims into having sex, the court report said.

Habbo Hotel, which is a virtual hotel environment where players can socialise using customised avatars called Habbos, has been embroiled in controversy since a documentary by Britain's Channel 4 revealed earlier this month that it was a hunting ground for paedophiles.

In the documentary, one of the channel's reporters played Habbo Hotel on several occasions while posing as a teenager.

She received a number of sexual innuendos and was repeatedly asked by other players in the chatroom to take off her clothes in front of a webcam, the documentary showed.

The game is owned by Sula Corporation, a Helsinki-based entertainment company focused on online social games.

Habbo Hotel has 268 million registered users around the world and nine million unique visitors each month, with 90 percent of users between the ages of 13 and 18.

Indian doc removes 13cm live worm from man's eye

MUMBAI (AFP) - When an elderly Indian patient came to Dr V. Seetharaman with persistent pain in his eye, what the surgeon found was reminiscent of a far-fetched alien movie plot: a live, 13 centimetre-long worm.

On examining the 75-year-old at Mumbai's Fortis Hospital this week, the eye expert was shocked by the highly unusual sight of the writhing parasite and had to operate speedily to remove it before serious damage was caused.

"It was wriggling there under the conjunctiva," Seetharaman told AFP, referring to the thin membrane lining the eye. "It was the first time in my career of 30 years that I had seen such a case."

Retired patient P.K. Krishnamurthy had been suffering for more than two weeks with redness and irritation before the doctor pin-pointed the threadlike creature under a microscope.

The specialist removed the 13-centimetre (five-inch) worm by making a small opening in the conjunctiva -- a 15-minute operation that was observed by the patient's horrified wife, Saraswati.

The patient was relieved of his symptoms while the worm, which was alive for another 30 minutes after surgery, was sent to the hospital's microbiologists to be identified.

Seetharaman had previously only heard of worms of about two to three centimetres being removed. "Probably this is a record," he said.

He suggested the creature could have entered the patient from a cut in his foot or from eating raw or improperly cooked food, before entering the bloodstream and travelling to the eye.

"If the worm was not removed it could have gone into the layers of the eye and caused visual loss," he said. "It could have entered the brain and caused major neurological problems."

European court urged not to accredit Down's syndrome tests

STRASBOURG (AFP) - Groups supporting people with Down's syndrome on Thursday called on the European Court of Human Rights not to recognise the right to tests that would detect the condition before birth.

The Strasbourg-based court must "recognise the human condition and protect the right to life of people with Down's syndrome and those handicapped", said the 30 associations from 16 countries.

The groups were meeting as the court was examining the case of a Latvian mother, Anita Kruzmane, whose 10-year-old daughter suffers from the chromosomal disorder.

Before Latvian courts she had accused her doctors of having failed to offer the prenatal screening, saying it would have allowed her to have an abortion.

After judges rejected her suit, Kruzmane took her case to the European rights court arguing that her right to a proper family life had been violated.

But the head of the international federation of Down's syndrome organisations, Ireland's Patrick Clarke, questioned whether abortions because of a genetic defect should be a right.

To eradicate a disease is one thing, but to eradicate people with a medical condition is something else, said Clarke who has an adult son with the condition.

For Jean-Marie Le Mene, the head of a French foundation that backs research into Down's syndrome, also known as trisomy 21, the Kruzmane case is part of a larger context in which parents' liberty to keep a trisomic child is "threatened by a policy of eugenics", which aims to improve the genetic composition of a population.

This policy which paths the way to almost systematic screening leads to abortions in almost all cases in which the foetus is found to be trisomic, said Le Mene. The court was expected to rule within the next few months.

Four-in-one AIDS drug gets the OK in clinical trial

PARIS (AFP) - An experimental once-daily pill that combines four drugs to fight HIV is as safe and effective as commonly-prescribed treatments against the AIDS virus, researchers reported in The Lancet Friday.

Doctors tested the new drug, called Quad, for the third and final phase in which new pharmaceutical products are vetted for safety and effectiveness.

Publication in the British journal follows a recommendation in May by a US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) advisory panel to approve Quad for previously untreated adults infected with HIV-1. A final decision is expected by August.

The first trial entailed testing Quad against a three-in-one pill, Atripla, which since 2006 has been a standard treatment for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV).

Researchers enrolled 700 patients in centres in North America and assigned them randomly to either Quad or Atripla.

After 48 weeks of treatment, 88 percent of Quad patients had suppressed viral loads to below detectable levels, against 84 percent in the Atripla group.

Side effects were infrequent but similar in both groups. Among Quad patients, mild nausea was the more common adverse event, whereas with Atripla, symptoms were likelier to be dizziness, abnormal dreams or insomnia and skin rashes.

In the second trial, 708 patients were enrolled in Australia, Europe, North America and Europe.

Patients were either given Quad or a widely recommended therapy comprising the molecules atazanavir (ATV), boosted by ritonavir (RTV), together with emtricitabine (FTC) and tenofovir disoproxil fumarate, or TDF.

After 48 weeks, 90 percent of the Quad group had viral levels below detectable levels compared to 87 percent in the other drug group.

Only 3.7 percent of patients in the Quad group stopped treatment because of side effects, compared with 5.1 percent in the other group. On the other hand, the number who reported kidney complications in the Quad group was relatively higher.

Quad comprises FTC and TDF, along with a drug called elvitegravir (ETV), which is designed to inhibit HIV replication. The fourth ingredient is a "pharmacoenhancer" called cobicistat to boost the effectiveness of ETV.

The movement towards a single once-daily pill to suppress HIV has a huge benefit for patients, say AIDS researchers.

When the first antiretroviral drugs emerged in the 1990s, patients had to take a dozen tablets a day or more, a "pill burden" that meant many forgot to follow the entire treatment.

"Patient adherence to medication is vital, especially for patients with HIV, where missed doses can quickly lead to the virus becoming resistant," said Paul Sax of Harvard Medical School, who led the first study in Friday's Lancet.

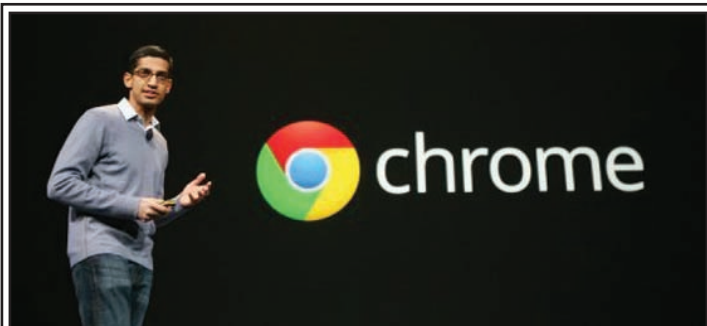

"Our results provide an additional highly potent, well-tolerated treatment option, and highlight the simplicity of treatment resulting from combining several antiretrovirals in single pill."

Quad is made by the US pharmaceutical giant Gilead Sciences, which also funded the trials, a practice that is relatively common in drug development.

Clinical tests for new drugs have to go through a three-phase process that is scrutinised by independent assessors and government regulators for safety and objectivity. Publication of the research in a peer-reviewed journal is a final step in the procedure.

MADRID (AFP) - A forest fire in eastern Spain forced 700 people to evacuate their homes and indirectly caused a brief power cut at a nuclear plant, authorities said Friday. The fire had burned 10 square kilometres (3.8 square miles) of land in the Valencia region. An electrical plant was evacuated in Cortes de Palla and the resulting loss of current forced a nuclear plant in nearby Cofrentes to briefly switch to generator power before normal functioning resumed, a spokeswoman for the region said. The fire was started by an act of negligence during the installation of solar panels in a home, the regional government statement said. Around 1,000 emergency personnel were working to fight the blaze, along with 28 helicopters and airplanes. "The number of hectares burnt is more than 7,000 and all the work is focussing on preventing the fire from spreading and on channelling it towards an area where it is easier to extinguish," the government statement said. It was the latest in a series of bush fires around Spain this year that have followed one of the driest winters for decades.

American man critical after chimpanzee mauling in S.Africa

JOHANNESBURG (AFP) - An American research student was in a critical condition in a South African hospital on Friday after he was dragged by chimpanzees into an enclosure at a primate sanctuary and attacked.

The mauled body of the student, identified in local media as Andrew Oberle, was retrieved from the enclosure by paramedics under armed guard at the Jane Goodall Institute Chimp Eden near the eastern town of Nelspruit.

"When we found him, he was in a foetal position underneath a lapa (a roofed, open-walled structure) with massive injuries, lacerations, abrasions, partial amputation from his head to toe," said Lloyd Krause, spokesman for the ER24 emergency service.

"He lost an ear, he lost a number of fingers and toes, he's got very deep wounds, he's got total removal of skin and muscle off his one leg and his one arm, fractures all over the place."

The man was with a group of tourists when the attack took place on Thursday. The Beeld newspaper said he had been at the sanctuary for two weeks and was giving a lecture to the group.

"According to eyewitnesses, two chimpanzees grabbed the man by his feet and pulled him under the perimeter fence and into the enclosure," said Jeffrey Wicks, spokesman for emergency service Netcare 911.

"The man was dragged nearly a kilometer into the large enclosure while being attacked by the two animals."

He is now in intensive care after undergoing surgery at the Mediclinic Nelspruit hospital.

The sanctuary, which has temporarily closed after the attack, did not name the man but said he was a graduate student at the University of Texas at San Antonio studying for his masters degree in anthropology and primatology.

"This is a terrible tragedy that should never happen," said David Oosthuizen, executive director of the Jane Goodall Institute-South Africa in a statement.

"All our thoughts and prayers are with this young man and his family."

Oosthuizen said chimpanzees were wild animals that were defensive of their territory, and that those at the sanctuary had to be treated with caution as they had been subjected to injuries and abuse from humans.

Chimp Eden is a sanctuary for rescued chimpanzees, an animal that does not naturally occur in South Africa, and is a joint venture between the Jane Goodall Institute-South Africa and a private park.

It featured in an Animal Planet TV series called "Escape to Chimp Eden".

India software giant TCS warns of market weakness

MUMBAI (AFP) - India's biggest outsourcer Tata Consultancy Services warned yesterday of "weakness" in global markets, marking the latest downbeat comment to emerge from the country's flagship software industry.

In the March-ended quarter, TCS beat analysts forecasts with a 23 percent rise in net profit, and gave a relatively optimistic outlook.

But its rivals Infosys and Wipro gave muted forecasts, warning of a tough year ahead due to global uncertainty and the growing anti-outsourcing sentiment in the United States.

"There is weakness in multiple markets, both developed and developing," TCS chief executive N. Chandrasekaran told the annual general meeting of the company which is due to report its first-quarter earnings next month.

"The global business environment will be volatile and recovery a prolonged exercise," said Chandrasekaran.

The TCS chief gave no direct comment about the outlook for the quarterly earnings of the company, which is part of the steel-to-tea Tata conglomerate.

But analysts are not too optimistic about the performance of India's outsourcing firms for the quarter which ends on June 30.

"Management commentary from India's IT firms in the run up to April-June results has failed to enthuse," said Bhuvnesh Singh of Barclays Capital.

"The business outlook has not deteriorated but the macro-economic environment remains muddled, with the ambiguity on order inflows likely to continue into the end of the year," he said in a note to clients.

India's IT firms, including TCS, have expanded beyond the traditional main markets of United States and Europe, into newer markets like Latin America, Africa and China to boost revenues.

The National Association of Software and Services Companies (NASSCOM) has said exports by the sector are expected to increase by up to 14 percent to $78 billion in the fiscal year that began April 1.

However, some analysts have said that the forecast is too optimistic.

British banks caught in a storm of scandal

LONDON (AFP) - British banks, including HSBC and Barclays, yesterday were ordered to compensate businesses for "serious failings" over the sale of complex products, capping a scandal-hit week for lenders.

Britain's banks needed a "real change in culture" following a series of scandals that have rocked the country's financial sector in recent days, Bank of England (BoE) head Mervyn King told a press conference yesterday.

And British Prime Minister David Cameron, attending an EU summit in Brussels, kept up pressure on Barclays chief executive Bob Diamond, saying that probes into allegations of interbank rate manipulations must be seen through.

In London, regulator the Financial Services Authority (FSA) said it had reached agreement with Barclays, HSBC, Lloyds and Royal Bank of Scotland (RBS) "to provide appropriate redress" for mis-selling interest rate hedging products.

The affected banks issued statements stating that the due compensation would have little impact on earnings.

Far worse for Barclays was expected to be the fallout from record fines imposed on the bank for rigging interest rates. Also this week, a severe IT meltdown at bailed-out RBS left millions of customers unable to complete transactions.

RBS chief executive Stephen Hester said yesterday he would forgo his bonus this year because of the IT chaos.

"I think it is inappropriate for me to have a bonus this year. We have let our customers down," he told the BBC.

Anticipating a backlash over the rates rigging fines, Barclays' Diamond and other senior executives at the bank said on Wednesday that they would forgo their annual bonuses due for their work in 2012.

"It is vital that all investigations under way get to the bottom of what has happened, it is vital that they go wherever the evidence leads and hold those responsible to account without fear or favour," Cameron said yesterday.

Shares in Barclays plunged by as much as 17 percent on Thursday, wiping billions of pounds from its value, as Cameron and British finance minister George Osborne said the bank had "serious questions" to answer.

So far Barclays has ignored calls for Diamond to resign ahead of an appearance by the US national before British deputies likely next week to explain the inter-bank rates rigging scandal.

"We can see we need a real change in the culture of the (banking) industry," BoE Governor King said yesterday. "And that will require two things. One is leadership of an unusually high order and changes to the structure of the industry."

Earlier, the FSA said in a statement that it had "found serious failings in the sale of interest rate hedging products to some small and medium sized businesses."

It added: "We believe that this has resulted in a severe impact on a large number of these businesses. In order to provide as swift a solution to this problem as possible we have today confirmed that we have reached agreement with Barclays, HSBC, Lloyds and RBS to provide appropriate redress where mis-selling has occurred."

Portuguese migrants seek a slice of Brazil's economic boom

Gonçalo Pires left 'a pretty depressing environment' in Portugal to open a company in Brazil where he says the market is on fire. Pires is part of a growing wave of Portuguese migrants seeking refuge from the crunch in Brazil, where the economy grew 7.5% last year, the highest rate in more than two decades.

LONDON (AFP) - Grammy Award-winning British soul diva Adele announced on Friday that she is pregnant with her first child. The 24-year-old, who swept this year's Grammys after the success of her second album "21", revealed the news on her official website, adding that she and boyfriend Simon Konecki were "over the moon". The bubbly Londoner has reportedly been dating 36-year-old entrepreneur Konecki since last summer, and the couple went public with their relationship in January. Adele's pregnancy caps an incredible year, which has seen her bounce back from throat surgery and "21" top the charts around the world. She took six gongs at the Grammys in Los Angeles in February, a record previously only matched by Beyonce. Adele told the US magazine "People" in February that she was keen to "be a mum".

PRAGUE (AFP) - British actress Helen Mirren added a "crystal globe" to her collection of awards Friday as the Czech Republic's Karlovy Vary international film festival opened for its 47th edition. The festival's jury will consider 12 films and announce a grand-prize winner at its closing ceremony. Mirren, who won an Oscar for her role in the 2006 film "The Queen", received the festival's crystal globe award for her contributions to world cinema. Czech President Vaclav Klaus also attended the opening ceremony.

Tom Cruise, Katie Holmes split

LOS ANGELES (AFP) - Hollywood dream couple Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes are getting divorced after five years of marriage, People magazine reported Friday.

The office of New Jersey divorce attorney Jonathan Wolfe confirmed to the Los Angeles Times that he is representing 33-year-old Holmes in the proceedings, but declined to say whether the process had formally begun.

Cruise, who turns 50 on Tuesday, wed Holmes in a storybook Italian castle in November 2006 after famously declaring his love for the former "Dawson's Creek" star live on "Oprah." They have a six-year-old daughter, Suri.

It was Holmes's first marriage and Cruise's third.

The split comes just 10 days after the "amicable" parting of US actor Johnny Depp and French singer/actress Vanessa Paradis, and will doubtless lead to renewed chatter about the pressures on Hollywood star couples.

Fireworks lit up the night sky above the 15th-century Odescalchi castle near Rome when Cruise and Holmes tied the knot on November 18, 2006 following a whirlwind romance.

Glitterati from the worlds of cinema, sports and music were on hand at the sprawling estate perched above the lakeside town of Bracciano as Holmes offered her hand to the "Mission Impossible" star.

Italian media reported that American Scientology leader David Miscavige officiated at the event, arguably the most high-profile Scientologists' wedding to date, in a ceremony that lasted no more than 15 minutes.

Reports at the time said that under the prenuptial agreement, Holmes would receive $3 million for every year of the marriage plus ownership of a California mansion if they split.

Cruise, still one of Hollywood's most bankable stars as shown by recent box office smash "Mission: Impossible - Ghost Protocol," was married to Australian actress Nicole Kidman from 1990 to 2001. The couple had two children.

He was also married to American actress Mimi Rogers from 1987 to 1990 and had a three-year relationship with Spanish actress Penelope Cruz after splitting up with Kidman.

Holmes, who was born and raised in Toledo, Ohio appeared in "Batman Begins" (2005) and starred alongside Adam Sandler in the critically panned 2011 romantic comedy "Jack and Jill."

Spain v Italy -- the key Euro 2012 final battles

ITALY 2012 EURO CUP SQUAD

KIEV (AFP) - The individual battles that will help determine the outcome of Sunday's Euro 2012 final between Italy and defending champions Spain at the Olympic Stadium in Kiev:

Andres Iniesta (ESP) v Christian Maggio (ITA)

Suspended for the semi-final victory over Germany, Italy right-back Maggio will compete with Ignazio Abate for the right to start in Sunday's final, when he is likely to come up against the in-form Iniesta.

Whether deployed as a wing-back in a 3-5-2 system or as a more conventional right-back in a back four, Maggio's chief defensive responsibility will be to keep tabs on the roaming Barcelona midfielder.

Iniesta's tendency to drift infield will force Maggio onto his weaker left foot, and the Napoli man is likely to require support from his colleagues in central midfield.

Maggio likes to attack but he will also need to be aware of the over-lapping runs of Spanish left-back Jordi Alba, who stormed forwards to set up Xabi Alonso's opening goal in the 2-0 quarter-final victory over France.

Xavi (ESP) v Andrea Pirlo (ITA)

It is rare for playmakers to find themselves in direct opposition to each other, but Pirlo's habitual positioning in front of the Italian defence means he will be operating in the same territory as Spain's chief schemer, Xavi.

Pirlo has been one of the stars of the tournament and received the man-of-the-match award after both Italy's penalty shoot-out win over England in the quarter-finals and the last-four success against Germany.

"He is indispensable -- the avenue down which all moves go in whichever team he is in," says former Italy coach Giovanni Trapattoni.

The 33-year-old Pirlo configures his side's attacks with strafing passes from deep positions and Xavi, perhaps in tandem with Spain's starting striker, will need to cut out those passes before they are launched.

Xavi's failure to impose himself at the tournament has been symptomatic of Spain's toils in attack, but he will only need an inch of room to punish Italy and remind the world of his quality.

Xabi Alonso (ESP) v Daniele De Rossi (ITA)

Having been deployed at the heart of a three-man defence in Italy's first two games, De Rossi has since returned to his preferred role in central midfield.

Spain v Italy – previous encounters

KIEV (AFP) - Over the years there has been little to separate Spain and Italy, who will contest the final of Euro 2012 on Sunday at Kiev's Olympic Stadium.

Since a 0-0 draw in their first meeting in March 1924, there have been seven wins for Spain, eight victories for Italy, and 10 draws, including the 1-1 stalemate between the sides in their opening Group C match on June 10.

July 9, 1994

ITALY 2 SPAIN 1 (1994 World Cup quarter-finals)
Roberto Baggio's 88th-minute winner took Italy into the semi-finals at the 1994 World Cup, after Dino Baggio's 25-yard strike in the first half had been cancelled out by Spain's Jose Luis Caminero.

The match is perhaps best remembered for the moment late in the game when Italy's Mauro Tassotti swung his elbow into Luis Enrique's face, breaking the Spaniard's nose and later earning the perpetrator an eight-game ban.

Italy beat Bulgaria 2-1 in the last four before facing Brazil in the final, when their hopes of a fourth World Cup crown were dashed by Roberto Baggio's ballooned spot-kick in the penalty shoot-out.

A stunning left-foot volley from David Villa gave Spain victory in a pre-Euro 2008 friendly match in the Spanish town of Elche.

The Valencia striker fired a sumptuous volley into the top right-hand corner of Gianluigi Buffon's goal in the 77th minute after Fabio Cannavaro had headed away a long ball.

Italy had their moments, with Luca Toni having a goal ruled out for offside in the first half and Mauro Camoranesi hitting the bar in the second, but it was Spain who prevailed to extend their unbeaten run to 14 matches.

June 22, 2008

ITALY 0 SPAIN 0 (Spain win 4-2 on penalties; 2008 European Championship quarter-finals)

A turning point in the history of the Spanish national side, as Luis Aragones' men secured a victory that gave them the belief to establish themselves as the world's top national team.

A tight game at Vienna's Ernst Happel Stadium went to extra time and penalties, and after Spain goalkeeper Iker Casillas denied Daniele De Rossi and Antonio Di Natale, Cesc Fabregas stepped up to put Spain in the semi-finals.

"This is an important victory for this young side," said the Arsenal midfielder. "We have been waiting for this for a long time."

One week later, Spain beat Germany 1-0 in the same stadium to claim their first European Championship title since 1964.

August 10, 2011

Alberto Aquilani's late goal in Bari gave Italy a 2-1 victory over the side who had succeeded them as world champions 13 months earlier.

Roger Federer

LONDON (AFP) - Roger Federer kept his dreams of equalling Pete Sampras's record of seven Wimbledon titles narrowly alive on Friday as top seeds Novak Djokovic and Maria Sharapova also reached the last 16.

Six-time champion Federer survived a huge scare, coming within just two points of crashing to his worst Wimbledon defeat in 10 years before battling from two sets down to beat French 29th seed Julien Benneteau.

Federer clinched an eighth career fightback from two sets in arrears to win 4-6, 6-7 (3/7), 6-2, 7-6 (8/6), 6-1 and will face unseeded Belgian Xavier Malisse for a place in the quarter-finals.

The Swiss star, who won the last of his record 16 Grand Slam titles at the 2010 Australian Open, was staring at his earliest defeat at the All England Club since a shock first round exit to Mario Ancic in 2002.

But after being two points away from joining Rafael Nadal on the Wimbledon scrapheap in the 12th game of the fourth set, Federer raced through the decider as Benneteau wilted and twice needed treatment by the trainer.

Defending champion Djokovic avoided another Czech Republic Centre Court ambush with a 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2 win over veteran Radek Stepanek.

Djokovic, like Federer, playing under the roof on the same court where Rafael Nadal had been stunned by world 100 Czech Lukas Rosol on Thursday, overcame dropping his first set of the tournament to see off 33-year-old Stepanek.

The Serb goes on to play compatriot Victor Troicki, who put out Argentine 15th seed Juan Monaco 7-5, 7-5, 6-3, for a place in the quarter-finals.

French 18th seed Richard Gasquet, a semi-finalist in 2007, beat 12th seed Nicolas Almagro 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 to claim a first win over the Spaniard in four meetings.

He will tackle German 31st seed Florian Mayer who edged

SPAIN 1 ITALY 1 (2012 European Championship group stage)

The sides last met three weeks ago in their opening Group C match in the Polish

Polish qualifier Jerzy Janowicz 7-6 (7/5), 3-6, 2-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Xavier Malisse of Belgium, who reached the last four in 2002, defeated Spanish 17th seed Fernando Verdasco 1-6, 7-6 (7/5), 6-1, 4-6, 6-3 to set up a date with Federer.

Denis Istomin became the first Uzbek to make the last 16 when he defeated Alejandro Falla of Colombia 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 7-6 (7/5).

He will face Russian 26th seed Mikhail Youzhny who saw off Serb eighth seed Janko Tipsarevic 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Women's top seed Sharapova cruised to a 6-1, 6-4 victory over Taiwan's Hsieh Su-Wei as the world number one set up a Wimbledon rematch with Sabine Lisicki.

Sharapova breezed past world number 63 Hsieh despite some serious issues with her serve in the windy conditions on Court One.

The French Open champion's reward for a typically gritty display is a last 16 meeting with German 15th seed Lisicki in a repeat of last year's Wimbledon semi-final clash which the Russian won in straight sets.

Former world number one Kim Clijsters, a semi-finalist in 2003 and 2006 and playing her last Wimbledon before retirement, reached the last 16 when Russian Vera Zvonareva quit with breathing problems.

Twelfth seed Zvonareva, the 2010 runner-up to Serena Williams, was trailing 6-3, 4-3 at the time.

Clijsters goes on to face German eighth seed Angelique Kerber who reached the last 16 for the first time with a 6-2, 6-3 win over American 28th seed Christina McHale.

city of Gdansk, which witnessed tactical innovations from both teams.

While Spain coach Vicente del Bosque deployed Fabregas as a 'false nine' at the tip of a fluid 4-3-3 system, his Italy counterpart Cesare Prandelli lined his team up in an experimental 3-5-2 formation.

"We were surprised (that Spain played with no recognised strikers)," said Prandelli. "But we decided to keep our system because we hurt Spain on the flanks."

Di Natale put Italy ahead in the 61st minute, racing onto Andrea Pirlo's pass before neatly beating Casillas, but Fabregas earned Spain a share of the spoils by equalising just three minutes later.

SPAIN 2012 EURO CUP SQUAD

Although he has played in defence on occasion for club side Roma, the 28-year-old is more accomplished in the middle of the pitch and his aggressive tackling helped set the tone for the 2-1 victory over Germany in Warsaw.

With Xavi short of form, Xabi Alonso has emerged as the key creative force in the reigning champions' midfield.

Italy coach Cesare Prandelli will not want the gifted Real Madrid organiser to be given too much time on the ball and one of De Rossi's chief responsibilities will be to deny Alonso space.

Sergio Ramos (ESP) v Mario Balotelli (ITA)

The enfant terrible of Italian football, Balotelli stamped his mark on the competition with a fine brace against Germany - a powerful header followed by an emphatic finish that left goalkeeper Manuel Neuer rooted to the spot.

Long maligned for his indiscipline, the Manchester City striker earned praise from Prandelli for his selfless work at the tip of the Italian attack.

The partnership between Balotelli and Antonio Cassano is liable to give Spain's defenders headaches, with both men prone to drift wide, obliging their markers to move out of position.

Ramos and fellow centre-back Gerard Pique must also be alert to high balls over the top of the Spanish defence, as Italy possess pinpoint passers in the shape of Pirlo and Riccardo Montolivo.

The CISC (Caribbean Islands Swimming Championship) is considered one of the most challenging in the region. Participants from Antigua & Barbuda, Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Virgin Island, Aruba was the proud host and knew how to bring the roof down at the Piscina Olimpico Roly Bislik in Savaneta. After leading the swimming competition on the first day the national selection had to conform after Trinidad and Tobago took over the leadership in points, up until the last.
